ToughGuys

stand out from the herd. The normal rules of civilization do not apply to them. They can be equally hero or villain, rebel or defender, noble or scoundrel— from above the law or below it. A dangerous rouge male, hunting alone in tight jeans and ice-blue eyes.

You do not approach a man like that, he approaches you. You respond with respectful tones and hope that you can handle what you get because you will be given no quarter. It is his way or the highway. No big deal, just the way it is...and a long line of eager others to take your place if you fail.

The attitude is unstudied, unhurried and powerful. The gaze is steady and calculating. The walk is a perfectly natural swagger that indicates that those balls are just too big to fit comfortably between the well-muscled legs.

Club Kids

I would like to commend you on your article in issue 209. I felt the article was informing to those who are not aware of the importance of leather clubs and the difference between them. I would also like to thank you for your continuous support in publishing our club activities in your Calendar section.

After being involved in the leather community for over 15 years, I have seen many clubs come and go. As you mentioned in your article, I have also noticed younger men and women becoming involved in clubs at a younger age. The most important thing we can do is to educate them; the right way and the wrong way of doing things. We don't want to lose any more. These young men and women are our future. I also commend you on your explanation of colors, vests, pins and pinning. One thing I would like to add is that pinning should not be used as an excuse to suck someone's cock. It is an offer of friendship. Anyone I have pinned over the years was just that: an offer of my club's friendship to them. We should never forget the true meaning of the pin.

One should also note that when wearing club colors, whether it be as a full member or associate, you represent that/those clubs. One should always wear colors with respect.

FG

Key West FL

Thank you. Anyone wanting to post an event on our leather calendar can send it to the Drummer office attention: Calendar.

As for the rest, you treat your friends the way you want to, I'll treat my friends the way I want to.

Real guys...at last

Thanks for the last Drummer issue with "real guys" instead of buffed, shaved models for a change. I met a few of your Drummer contestants at the Drummer contest in San Francisco and again at IML in Chicago. They are not very approachable guys, but just as hunky in person. Really thought Mr. Mid-Atlantic Drummer (Troy Taylor) was hot, but would have liked to see "more" of him in the layout. Why did you print full nudes of only some of the guys?

MEL

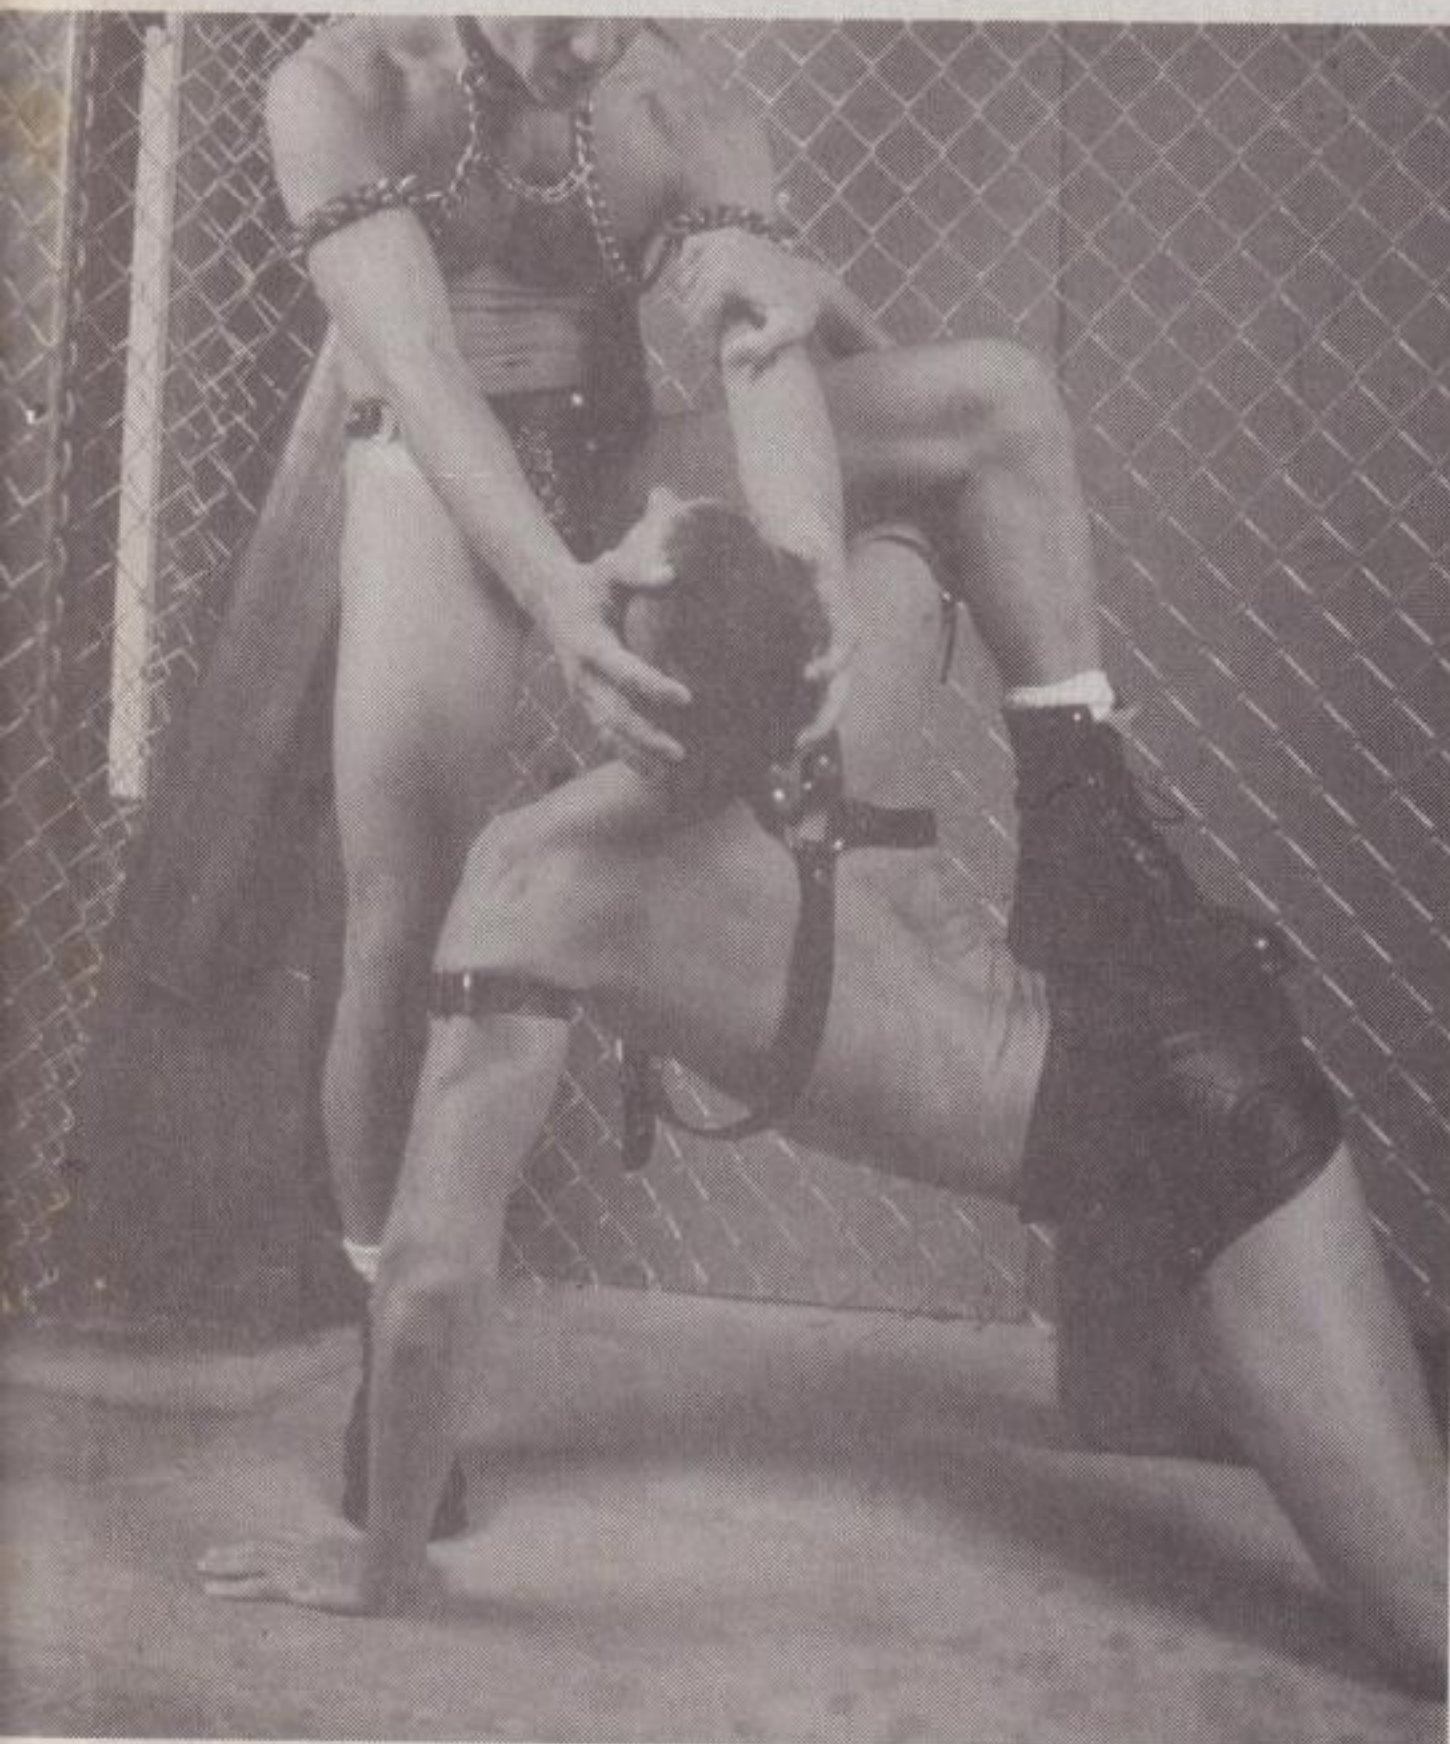

Naperville IL

We sent several strong men in to separate Mr. Taylor from his pants, but they never returned....

Seriously, we treat both our paid models and our Drummer contestants with respect and, in spite of a nudity clause in their contract, we will not force them to do what they are uncomfortable doing. Unless, of course, they LIKE to be forced to do what may be uncomfortable.....

Sick of Contests

I am so over contests and contestants! Everyone seems to be a little Miss Leather this or that. Your last issue was all about contests, featured no models except contestants and was totally worthless!

Drummer Photo, Issue 210, p.32

Where were the raunchy pics?
Where were the stories about

I like the new look but please interested in reading.

FP

San Francisco CA

The issue was timed to come out just after the IML contest when leather contests were a hot topic. This is also the first time the Mr. Drummer contestants were featured in their namesake magazine in many years. Overall, it was a well-received issue.

Snail Mail

I called your office and was told that my magazine (issue 209) was already mailed. It arrived 3 WEEKS later! Are you telling me it takes a month to get mail from San Francisco to Georgia! Also, why do I see Drummer on the newsstand weeks before I get mine?

TS

Lilburn GA

Issue 209 was released to the Post Office in San Francisco at the same time as millions of pieces of political mailings due to deliver before the May California Primary Election. Our magazine sat on the dock for over a week while 1st class and political mail took priority. Our little contribution to the democratic process....

In response to customer complaints, we sent several copies out to customers via 1st class mail at roughly seven times the usual postage.

Wholesale accounts are sent UPS, which is why you will always see the new issue on the stands before you get your copy. It is also why you are only paying $4.92 an issue ($4.08 for renewals) as opposed to the cover price of $6.95...plus tax.

This ain't K-Mart

After having read your last issue, the third in my four-issue subscription, I have decided your magazine is not for me. I am sure this kind of thing appeals to some people, and I have nothing against the kind of people who do the sort of sick things described by your articles. Please send me a refund for the remainder of my subscription.

RB

Hmmm. Only if you can find "Money-Back Guaranty if Erection Does Not Occur" printed anywhere in the magazines you received. Now, if we didn't deliver what we promised that would be another thing. This is pornography, it ain't a K-Mart store.

The Portable Dungeon

What Really Happens At A Leather Run and What Do I Pack?

By Robert Davolt

Every weekend, somewhere there is an event for men into leather or into trying up other men into leather. Most of these events are in the form of club or organizational runs- which for many, can be one of the most intense and rewarding types of functions a leatherman might attend.

Named after the old motorcycle runs that bike clubs used to take to get away from the city and the prying eyes of authorities, club runs survive today as the highest expression of those traditions which include motorcycle skills competitions, initiations and the parade of colors to recognize members of other clubs present.

With so many to choose from, and there being only 52 weekends a year, picking which run to attend can be a challenge.

Show Run or Sex Run?

Runs reflect the nature of the club or organization that sponsors them. Is the club primarily known for being a sex club, full of players or is it a social club known more for it's hospitality and for putting on a great show?

Is it an outdoor run or an in-town run at a hotel? Will there be dungeon space provided?

The annual run is an opportunity for a club to show itself at it's best. No effort is spared to make guests feel at home (and show up rival clubs in the region). There are unique features to each, but largely, a run weekend follows a familiar pattern.

Friday

Many times there are ice-breaker activities provided on the first night designed to introduce folks to one another and get them feeling comfortable. This is a get-to-know-ya and settling-in social time.

Friday is usually a slow night in the dungeon. Lots of cruising but not much action. After all, there is always tomorrow night.

Saturday

Usually early Saturday leaves you fairly much on your own to explore a new town, rest up for the evening's activities or participate in low-key activities. If you are attending as part of a club, you may wish to plan to join in some of the planned activities or suffer the wrath of your Road Captain. Activities (such as bondage demos, seminars, scavenger hunts and riding skills) may be scored for participation awards given out later.

Saturday night is usually a formal dinner with all participants in full leather or full club kit. After dinner, is traditionally a show put on by the host club, varying from amateur skits to full-blown production numbers.

Drummer Archive Photos

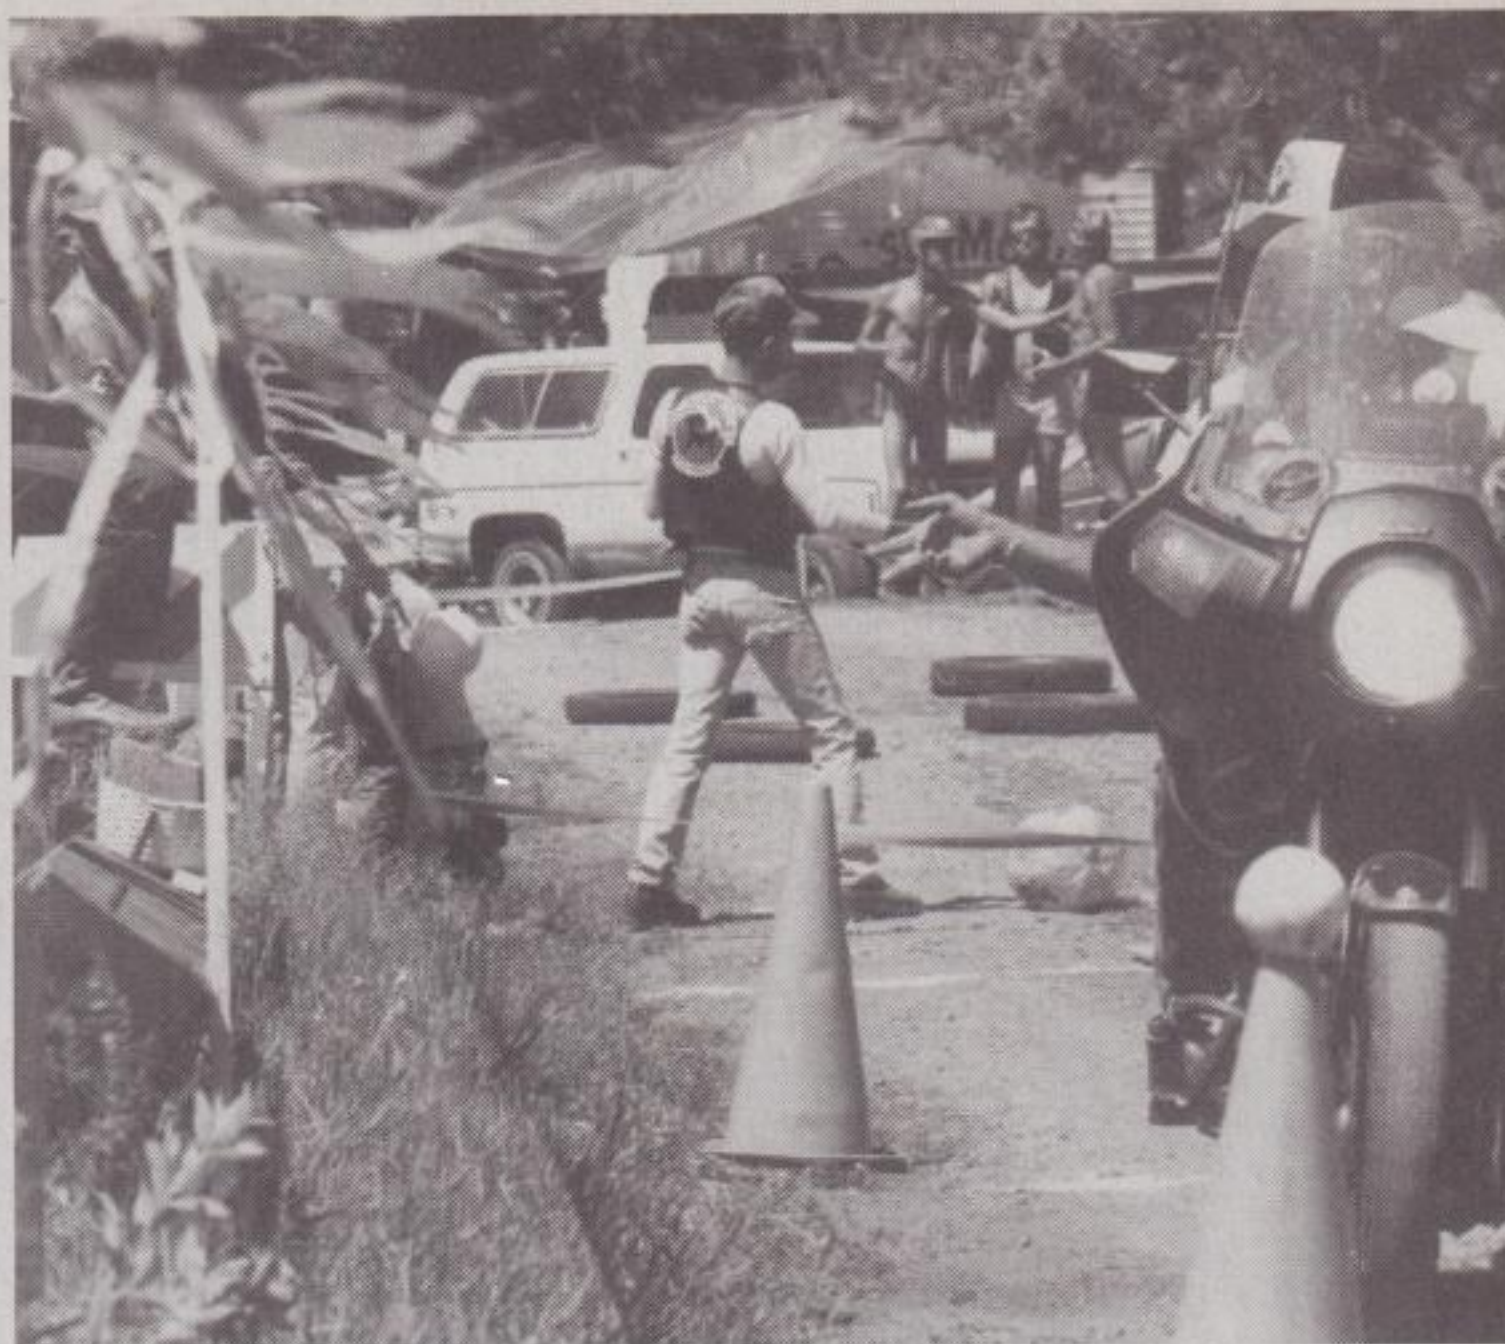

After ceremony and tradition have been served, it's Saturday night....

This is it. Last night you scoped out which rooms (tents, cabins or whatever) contained willing participants and tonight you test their willingness. The dungeon is crowded, there is action spilling out everywhere.

Sunday

Sunday is the bleary-eyed packing and go day. Few activities beyond exchanging numbers and knowing glances with the men you met last night.

After your first run, you will be hooked, socially and sexually. Are you still a virgin?

Great U.S. Runs

A Sampling of Some of the More Infamous

Inevitably, when you assemble a list like this you think, "I'm gonna get mail." There is no way I can include every club and organizational run in one column, but these are a few that stand out:

Inferno

The Chicago Hellfire Club- The Great Granddaddy of all club runs. Held at a resort in rural Michigan, Inferno is now in its 27th year and is divided into an "A" session and a "B" session on two separate weekends to accommodate all the afficiandos.

Held on two weekends surrounding Labor Day, one can only attend Inferno if invited by a member. The coveted invitations go out near IML each year so if you haven't gotten yours by now, you are out of luck.

Inferno is an intense weekend of SM and bondage competition, seminars and sharing among some of the premiere players in the U.S. and elsewhere.

Black Frost

The Black Guard of Minneapolis- The Mother of All Show Clubs put on their run in February. An indoor hotel run (for chrissake, it's Minneapolis in February!) Black Frost draws not just from the midwest but from the east and west coasts as well. The highlight is the Saturday night extravaganza that outdoes itself each year.

Wreckers Run

Key West Wreckers- This is included just out of sheer pluck. Anyone wearing leather in Key West deserves at least an honorable mention. Nice dungeon, active most all night.

No need to worry, though. A truly tropical run, the Wreckers hold most events in one of the town's clothing optional guesthouses. Laid back and languid, the Wrecker Run is the perfect pre-IML getaway.

Golden Gate Guards

Golden Gate Guard of San Francisco- Not much of a show, but great food and a beautiful location among the Northern California redwoods. The timing is perfect- in October, just a few weeks after the hustle of Folsom Street- so San Franciscans can relax and enjoy the motorcycle skills competition in a peaceful riverside camp. No dungeon, but very social.

The Begining of a New Drummer Serial!

Ian was forever getting himself in impossible situations until a mysterious stranger came along...

The Crystal Key

Part I: Rescue

By Bob Wayne

He had done it again. How he gets into these situations, well, he never could figure it out. Trussed up to a wooden cross in a basement at the mercy of a lunatic. Sweat plastered his dark hair, vicious clips were tearing at his nipples, and ponderous weights hung from his aching balls. The top had been gone for hours it seemed and Ian was worried that he would never get loose. He had heard a scuffle upstairs earlier. Did this guy have another boy upstairs? Was that a car?

The bindings themselves were very expertly done, not uncomfortable but with no possibility of escape. If it weren't for the clips and the ball-weights, he might have been able to hang there for hours more, which is exactly what worried him.

It wasn't that he didn't enjoy being a bottom. He prided himself on being an enthusiastic and skillful bottom. Ian just had no judgment when it came to choosing a top. His boyish good looks and body got him all kinds of attention and his willingness to try anything at least once were constantly getting him in trouble. He ran his tongue over a chipped tooth from a scene that went wrong in Chicago, and looked down at the jagged scar given him by an overly zealous Belgian master in Amsterdam. He had almost bought it that time in the boat off Long Beach, and countless other times. He seemed to attract not only the seriously sadistic but the dangerously unstable as well.

He shifted in the ropes. This guy hadn't looked that bad in the bar. He was a serious top, seemed to be known by most of the bartenders and many leathermen as well. His eyes strained to inspect the dungeon in the candlelight looking for some means of escape.

More scuffling upstairs. At least someone was still home.

Suddenly his thoughts were interrupted by two men who burst in shouting. Even in the dark, Ian could see they had guns and the guns were pointed at him. One of them found the light switch.

"Jesus!"

There was a very large man in the uniform of a city cop and man in a jacket and tie. Both of them had sidearms which looked to Ian like cannon and both of those were trained at a spot between Ian's eyes.

The man with the tie lowered his weapon first, muttering something under his breath.

"Get him down from there," he ordered the other man, "Get him some clothes."

The man in the uniform began to untie Ian.

"I'm not so sure," the big man scowled, "He could have killed the guy and slipped down here and tied himself up. Perfect alibi."

The man in the tie looked at him incredulously and said, "That's brilliant. He murders a man in cold blood, burglarizes the house, steals the car, comes back, slips down here and puts chains on his tits and lead sinkers on his nuts and ties himself to a post so we can find him hours later. You're right, the kid's a master criminal. I can't imagine why you haven't made detective after 25 years on the force."

The man in the uniform sniffed and snorted in protest as the one in tie just shook his head.

"Just do your fucking job. Get his statement and get him out of here."

As if in response, the cop detached just one of the nipple clamps and let it fall with a jerk. The tug on Ian's tender nipple made him jump. It had to be his imagination, but he thought he saw the blue uniform pants stir slightly at the sight of his pain.

The policeman then gruffly took Ian's statement about how and where he had met his trick, what time they had arrived at the house and what happened after that. Ian had to ask several times for his pants. The cop gave him his boots as well, after inspecting them. He was refused his shirt, however, and he shivered through the rest of the interview.

"That's evidence" the cop growled. Ian looked over his inquisitor, who was a big man but not really fat. He showed years of hard work and a bitterness. A salt and pepper flattop, capped a head with no discernable neck. Broad shoulders were attached to massive arms. The rank on his sleeve had obviously been pulled off and re sewn several times. It was one of those clues Ian should have been able to read by now: anyone who had made and lost rank that frequently was bound to be trouble.

Again, Ian thought he saw a stirring in the cop's blue polyester crotch whenever he described what he and the late top did together.

He grilled the boy for over an hour. When it came time for him to be released, the large man told Ian that there would be a few more papers to sign in the police unit parked around the corner. After that he could go but to keep available.

He was about to handcuff Ian for the walk to the car, until a sideways frown from his superior caused him to put the cuffs away.

Outside, Ian walked a little way down the street, cold in the night air but grateful to be out of that house and relieved to have seemingly escaped major harm. As he looked at the uniformed man next to him, he saw no kindness in his eyes. The grip on his arm was like iron and Ian's relief was beginning to turn to fear as the cop roughly shoved him into a small blind alley.

Suddenly, a white-hot sheet of pain came over him from the back of his head. The cop raised his nightstick for another blow as Ian reeled back against a pile of trash, stunned and groggy. His arms were pulled painfully behind his back and handcuffed in place. The cuffs were tight, and cut into the flesh on his wrists. When used to throw him against the brick wall, they cut even deeper.

"Cheap little slut! I should run you in at least for hustling!" the cop hissed between clenched teeth, "but you wouldn't last a minute in a tank full of drunks and perverts and I'd rather teach you a lesson myself!"

His fist slammed into Ian's midsection, doubling him over. A knee to the ribs, and rough hands pulled his jeans down to his thighs.

Ian was thrown to his knees and the cop took out a fat, cut dick, already slick with juice, and shoved it down his throat. Thank god, Ian thought, all he wants is a quick blow job. He was hoping this meant that he could get the big cop off quickly and all this would be over soon. He was a very good cocksucker and there weren't a lot of men he couldn't get off within just a few minutes. But his tormentor had nothing quite so simple in mind.

He grabbed Ian by the throat with one hand and slapped his face, hard from side to side.

"I'll bet you get a lot just by flashing that pretty face, don't you faggot? We'll see if anyone likes that face when I'm done with it."

Unable to concentrate on what he was doing, Ian could hardly keep the big meat in his mouth. He was constantly bobbing and struggling to continue the hellish business of getting it off and hopefully earning his own release.

"Man, look what you will do for that dick," the cop panted, "You must really want it no matter what I do to you!"

Slammed once more up against the brick wall, he couldn't move wedged between the cops muscular body and the rough brick. A thick arm was around his neck. The cop's demanding dick penetrated quickly with little hesitation or ceremony. The brutal assault shoved Ian's chest and face into the wall, scraping his already bleeding nipples raw

"You'll learn this lesson real good, kid"

The cop rammed his dick into his ass, one arm tightening on his victim's throat the other pinning his arms up around his shoulder blades by the handcuff chain.. The only relief was occasionally when he would punch Ian's side or slam his head into the bricks. The pain help him fight for consciousness, but he felt a trickle of blood running from the corner of his mouth and his upper lip began to swell with the blows. The closer the man came to climax the tighter his grip and the less often he would interrupt the stranglehold. Ian did not know how long he could stand this or what would happen to him after he passed out.

He did not notice when the stranger walked into the alley.

"I think the boy has had enough," the dark shape said, in a low tone. The assault stopped suddenly.

"I think the boy has had enough," the cop repeated in a far-away voice and let go of Ian's neck. As if hypnotized, the policeman simply dropped his quarry, turned and walked out of the alley, his fat dick still hanging from his pants.

Ian collapsed to the pavement. Finally able to breathe, Ian stopped fighting unconsciousness and slipped off into blackness.

When he awoke, he was in a soft bed. As his eyes adjusted he saw wondrous things. The furniture in the room was old and ornate. Fantastic pictures hung on the wall beside swords and animal heads and indescribable objects until there was hardly any wall showing at all.

The room was crammed with books, statues, papers, jars and bottles until it looked like the prop room in some sort of baroque theater. Ian had the impression that all of it was quite authentic, particularly the torture devices he saw left casually about as if in mid-use.

The bed that he lay in was a four-posted monster deeply carved with unbelievably muscled (and endowed) men who glared down at him with lust in their varnished eyes. Each one seemed to be looking directly at him, frozen with their hands groped themselves or roped and chained companions.

Ian looked down and saw that the handcuffs were gone. The cuts they left behind were bandaged and did not seem to hurt as much as he thought they might.

As more came into focus, he saw a figure fixing a tray of food. It was daylight.

"Have some breakfast. It will give you strength." It was the same deep hypnotic voice that he had heard in the alley.

This was his rescuer. He moved to nuzzle the man's crotch and render what he imagined was the expected price of delivery.

"Ian, you do not have to return every kindness with the favors of your body," the man said carefully as he gently push Ian's face back to the pillow, and with a smile added, "...in spite of it's obvious charms."

Ian ate a little something and settled back in the grand bed.

"I have watched you for some time and I am sure here is no way to change you-- not that I am sure I would want to," he went on, "but you certainly could use some protection, and I need to find a new keeper for the Crystal Key. We will help each other."

Ian tried very hard to absorb what the man was saying but movement had made his head light and he was fading from consciousness. Before he fell into a restful sleep, he heard the deep tones say kindly:

"Sleep, young cub, explanations can wait until next time." ■

Czar

Czar! by Larry Townsend. Published by LT Publications, PO Box 302, Beverly Hills CA, 90213. 642 pages, plus Glossary. $29.95. Reviewed by David May.

This is the tale of Ivan IV as told by a member of his court, minutely detailing how he lived up to his appellation "the Terrible" as he ruled over 16th century Russia. The first Russian monarch to take the title of czar, he did much to connect Russia with western Europe from which it had long been isolated by culture, geography and climate. He also drove his people beyond the point of despair as he channeled his genius into new and creative means of torturing his subjects.

There is more here about the terrors Ivan inflicted than many readers will be able to stomach, and Townsend almost lost me on several occasions, yet learning how the book's real hero, the narrator Prince Dmitri, survived and escaped the mad monarch is well worth the sordid details. Neither romantic nor histrionic, this is a rewarding but disturbing novel for the adventurous reader.

All in all, there is a little something for everyone here. Except perhaps those who have already read the material on the pages of Manifest Reader or other Alternate Publications.

Telling Father about Daddy

by boy henry

Dear Father,
I understand you met Daddy the other day.

At first I felt very guilty that I hadn't told you about this first, confronted you before you met accidentally. But how would explain my relationship to you? Remember when I tried to explain opera or the internet to you? There is no language available to make you understand.

Then I remember how it was you that cut the ties between us. I don't need to justify it or make apologize because I have built a very good life. If you could just try to keep an open mind, I'd like to try to share a little glimpse of it.

I think I can understand how upset you are, but remember this: you will always be my father. I respect you and am grateful for what you sacrificed to raise me.

I spent many years trying to prove I was worthy of that respect. I joined the Navy just like you did, I went to your alma mater, I just couldn't live my life the way I was expected to. I tried to, tried to deny that I was a sexual being, tried to cover-up the leatherman that was trying to break the surface.

Daddy changed all of that. Yes, he hits me, whips me and beats me (if I beg him to) but he is at last someone I don't have to be afraid of. How do I make you understand that someone who hurts me will never hurt me?

By serving Daddy's needs before my own, I have discovered patience and discipline. In sharing my life with him, I am part of something larger than just myself. My life has purpose and order. I am at most at peace serving the needs of other men, no matter what violence may be happening to my body.

You on the other hand, with your ignorance and your blind hate and your anti-gay initiatives you put the baseball bat in the hand of back-alley bashers. I greatly fear well-intentioned Christians such as you and your friends, Father.

You don't even want to talk about me being gay. You are ashamed of me. What would you say if you saw me in full leather? How can I tell you the pride I feel marching along side Sir with a hundred other leathermen in the Gay Pride Parade? What can compare to a gathering like International Mr. Leather?

It's been many years since we've seen each other, but I am rarely without my leather anymore. It is a badge of who I am: sexually and socially. My collar never leaves my body because it is a symbol of the relationship that makes it all worthwhile.

I know you have always been concerned about older men taking advantage of me. That is far from the case with Daddy. I wish I could tell you about what my Daddy gives me. Daddy is protector, teacher, lover and master. I know that I am as important to him as he is to me.

Everyday I wake up with the certainty that I am the one taking advantage of him.

My leather community has provided the brotherhood and support I needed when my family, my church and the rest of the world turned their back on me. I owe them my life many times over. That sort of closeness is just as mysterious and difficult to explain to outsiders as the intense, blinding cathartic sex that we experience.

Yes, it is about sex. The intensity of our comradeship reflects the intensity of our sex. My life is also about enjoying every sensation and every moment life has to offer. I want to be a participant, to savor every flavor and see every Pain, humiliation, piss, shit, confinement, fire, electricity. Everything you have heard about and more. Rather than merely face our fears, we take what other men fear and embrace it. What others are afraid to touch, we caress and make love to. No wonder we are such a strong and resilient people, because at that point, what is there we can be afraid of? ■

A Slave Auction Fantasy

a story by ryan, Mid-Atlantic Drummerboy 1998

MY THOUGHTS-

How I got here is too long a story, but here I now stand about to be sold to a new Master. I am petrified as I look out into the audience of bidders and wonder just who will buy me.. will it be the muscular bear daddy in the front row, the shaved head master in the military uniform? The man in leather with the motorcycle helmet? The man with four strapping slaves already leashed to his gloved hand?

God, I hope it's no one like the 85-year-old man with the walker in the corner.

My whole life will change in the next five minutes. I think they're going to start, here goes....

(Auctioneer, addressing audience, fast paced)

SOLD!!!... to the gentleman in the back row. Thank you, Sir, your number please, enjoy your purchase!

We will take a moment and return for the sale of Lot Number I-69, shown here...

Next up for bids, gentlemen, Lot I-69, 6 foot 4, 195 pounds., several tattoos and piercings, not all visible, but some shown here.

TURN AROUND, BOY!

Obedient as you can see, loyal, can cook, clean, and as I found out earlier, can handle most anything one can throw at him. He is excellent at serving any Master, wears on the right, if you may, a virtual rainbow of colors, including red, black, gray, yellow, navy.

TURN BOY!

May we start the bidding at 500? We have 5, I see 6, do I hear 7, yes: 700.

1,000 there, thank you Sir. And 15? 1,500. Sir, 2,000 yes! A fine, tall boy with great potential.

3,500, thank you, 3,500 once, twice. 5000. Do I hear 6? I stand at 5,000, do I hear 6?

5,000 my final, going once, twice, sold to the elderly man with the walker in the corner for 5,000.

ON YOUR KNEES BOY!

I can't believe it, I was bought by him. Out of the whole crowd of daddies and masters whom I would kill to lie at their feet, I was bought by a man who could be, and might as well be, my great-grandfather!

I knelt backstage as the old man wrote the check to claim me. I shook inside thinking of what life would be like now serving him. He approached and did not make eye contact, his cold hands took me by the collar and brought me to my feet. He led me to a long, exquisite antique limousine. The engine purred as we stepped in. He did not speak.

We drove for hours and he never spoke a word. Finally, to my shock we pulled up to an incredible mansion, we passed gardens, fountains, statues, gates, all this was impressive, but he was definitely not the daddy I had always dreamed of.

Still, the old man never spoke. He led me into the most magnificent home I could imagine, then down a long hallway. He opened a pair of massive bolted doors and in front of me was the most extensive dungeon I had ever seen. Before I could turn towards him, he was gone.

I was scared. I thought I was alone, but from the darkness of the corner walked towards me a massive man with dark complexion.

His chiseled torso was completely covered with a pelt of tan and silver fur which glistened in the candlelight as he walked towards me. His slow heavy walk made me tremble with anticipation and curiosity. He stopped directly in front of me wearing nothing but a pair of white boxers which just about covered the head of a throbbing uncut cock. He stood in front of me and looked me over. He lifted my head and stared into me. His piercing eyes entranced me and made me shake from excitement and confusion. He took me by my crotch and led me to an enormous fireplace with a marble hearth.

The man lifted me slightly with one hand then pushed me down onto the hearth. Standing over me, he forced my head to the marble with his foot. His rough hard hands took hold of my ass as he knelt down behind me. Fingering my hole and tugging on my fresh Prince Albert, he pressed his pulsing uncut cock against my ass.

The marble was ice cold, but the heat from his giant sweaty cock as he thrust it in me set my insides on fire. I was lost in his strides and soon forgot where I was and how I got there. In one hand he held down both of my arms and began to paddle my ass with a cold, leather razor strap.

As he brought the pace up on my ass, I erupted with a week's worth of cum in my codpiece. He reached inside the cup to retrieve my load and fed it to me, the first meal I had eaten in almost three days.

He pushed me back down and began fucking me again. I could feel the veins in his cock run along my hole, his thick coat of fur warmed my body as it brushed against my back. I felt his grip tighten and then felt a shower of boiling cum cover my ass, back, and neck.

I don't remember anything after that. I woke up the next morning in a bed larger than many rooms I had slept in. It faced an open window which looked out onto the massive estate which I was driven onto the night before.

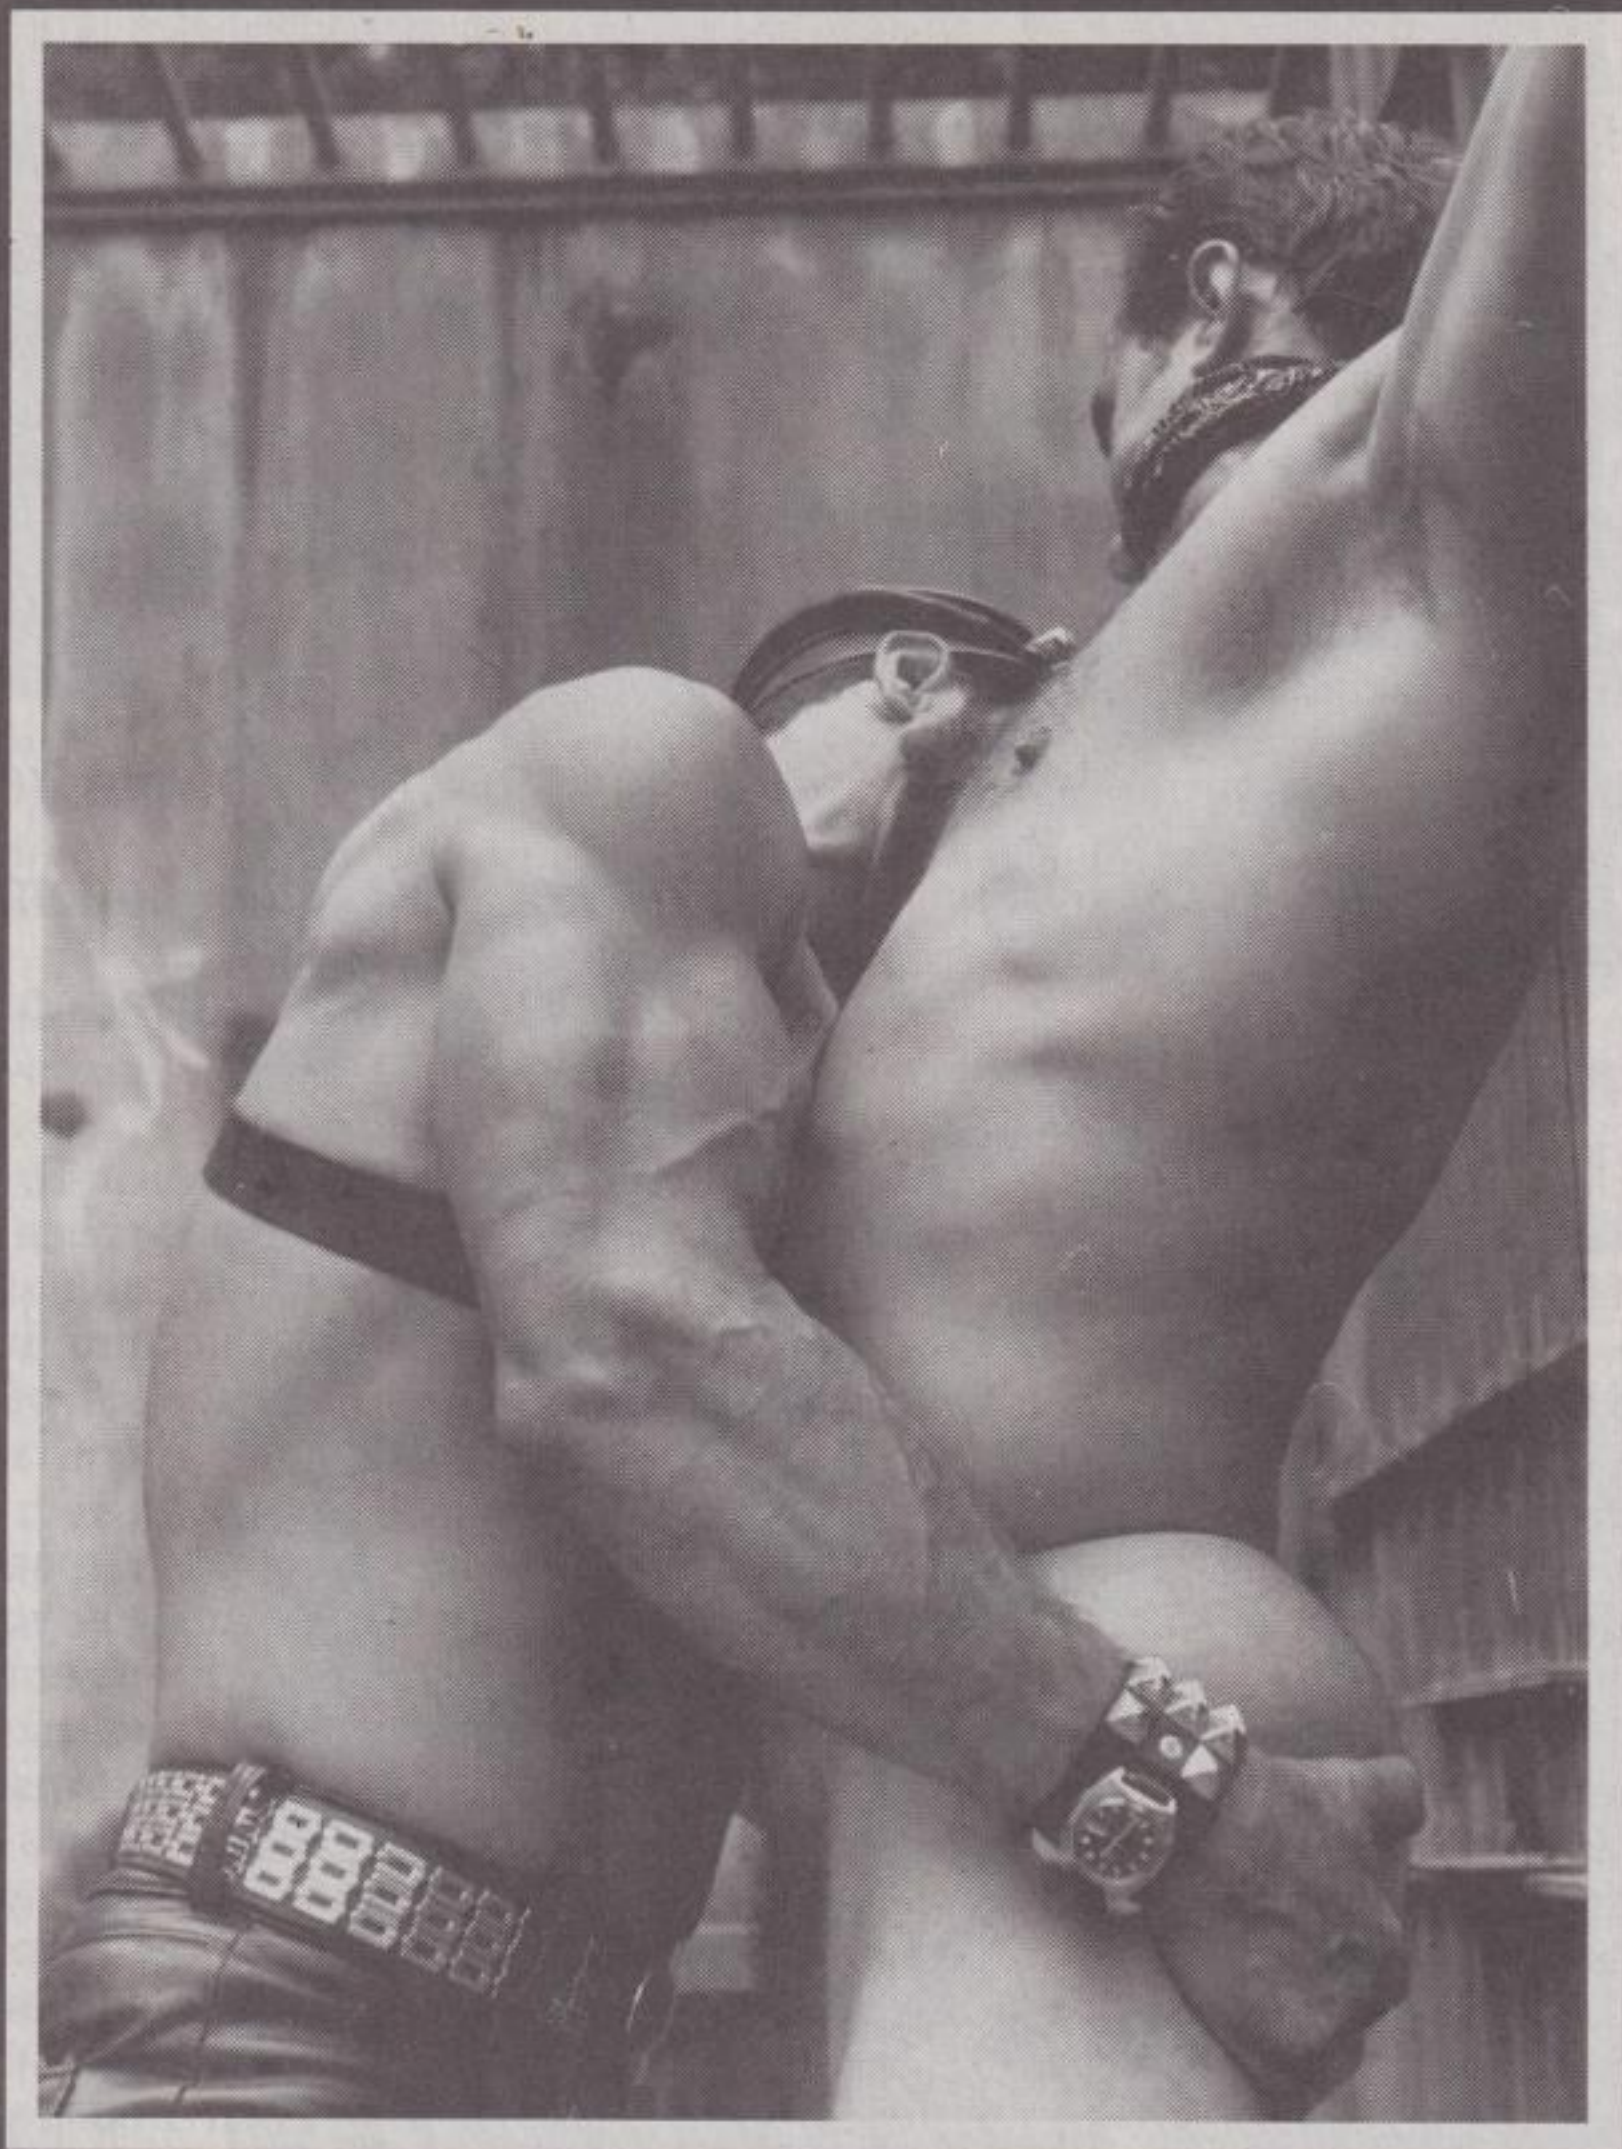

I walked to the hall where he was waiting. I had a million questions, but the first thing that came out of my mouth was "What the hell happened to the old man who bought me?"

He looked deeply into my eyes, touched my collar and raised my head to meet his piercing eyes.

He lifted my hand to his heart and said, "That old man bought me in an auction several years ago, similar to the one you were in last night. I wanted you, so he bought you for me, you're mine, you are now my boy, I am now YOUR daddy. No more auctions, you are mine forever." ■

This is the fantasy which, acted out on a stage in the Baltimore Eagle, won boy ryan goldner the title of Mid-Atlantic Drummerboy. As ryan pantomimed the action on stage, his words were read by a friend off-stage to set the mood for this exciting trip to a modern slave auction.

Jacob

by David May

The flat I live in today, so modern and new that there is even a car park underneath it, stands where the Meijer's house had stood before the war.

And the boys- excuse me, the young men- I watch play in their black leather night after night, are in the house I grew up in just across the Herengracht. Even without binoculars I can see them clearly enough at night to know what they're doing; but with binoculars I can see them in more detail, enough to stir my ancient loins. Sometimes it's even exciting enough for me to stroke myself until I come. Pretty good for an old man, I think.

The real irony, though, is that the games these young men play in their attic apartment were very real for Jacob and me during those frightening years of the war. And one of those young men, the American, looks so much like Jacob Meijer that when I see him on the street I can't help but stare. Sometimes it feels that I am as hopelessly in love with this dark haired stranger as I was with Jacob more than fifty years ago. And when this boy looks back at me, his face a question mark of concern, I turn my head for fear he'll see me weep, and walk away as quickly as my stiff, old legs will carry me.

Our home, one of the grand old canal houses Amsterdam is so famous for, was also where my father had his office. Even today people are impressed with the house's pristine marble entry hall with its high ceilings- all designed to show off the fine but austere taste of the house's original owner. To the right, in what had once been the spacious front sitting room, my father ran his architecture firm. Down the hall was the rest of the house and its many rooms scattered over four floors.

It was a spacious house for my parents, my younger brother and me. Even our maid, Jo, had a nice room next to the kitchen, large by Amsterdam standards, and luxurious to simple Jo who had come to us from the northern province of Friesland.

Jacob's family, the Meijers, lived across the canal from us. Their home was even grander than ours, and no office occupied the front sitting room where Jacob's family entertained guests, played music, and lit candles in the window to honor their Sabbaths and festivals.

Jacob was a few years older than me, so even though our parents were friendly we rarely saw each other outside the occasional passing in the streets. Even then, I'm sure he hardly acknowledged me, a shy and awkward child in awe of his exotic, dark features. It was only when he was studying architecture at University and began working in my father's office, and thus occasionally sharing our table at meals, that we began to be friends. I never ceased to be in wonder of his beauty. His black curly hair, high cheekbones, and sensual full lips filled me with something I didn't quite understand. I didn't understand it because I didn't yet know that a man could be in love with another man.

When the war came, when we were overrun by the Germans and our houses renumbered to suit their convenience, things changed rapidly. First, Jacob was kicked out of university because he was a Jew. Then the Germans started rounding up the Jews, outraging the city we sometimes called Mokum, a Hebrew word meaning "sacred place."

"No damn German will tell us what to do with our own damn Jews!" shouted my father at a passing Nazi before my mother hurriedly pulled him inside and out of harms way, for men were shot for less during those years. Someone else wrote on the wall of the canal, where it would be hardest to clean-off of course, "Dirty Germans keep your dirty hands off of our dirty Jews." We laughed at this knowing the insult would burn deep into the hearts of our hated "liberators."

I was terrified for the Meijers as well as others in our neighborhood, and scared for myself despite the German's propaganda of good intent toward us, their "Aryan brothers." Most of all I was frightened for Jacob. Somehow, though, Jacob escaped the Nazi's when he and his family were ordered to report to the authorities. He scrambled over walls and rooftops. Many a blind eye must have been turned as our neighbors saw his escape and silently prayed he'd find refuge somewhere -- just not with them. Finally he found his way into our back garden.

Without a second thought, my parents hid him in the attic room filled with crates and odd pieces of furniture. Then my parents went into action. My younger brother was sent with Jo to her family in Friesland where food was less scarce and rationing a distant problem. Then my Aunt Dora, forced out of her home in the Jordaan when a Nazi officer decided to take up residence there, moved in with us. This was the perfect excuse for me to move my bed into the attic while Aunt Dora slept in what had been my brother's bed. Now we had an answer should anyone ask why there were lights on in the attic, or why the attic was furnished at all. Best of all, though, now I had a reason to be near Jacob.

We slept in one bed. It was easier to explain than two beds should we ever come under suspicion. Behind the crates and old furniture that lined one wall was a hiding place, and beyond that we kept a bundle of warm clothing beside a window just large enough for Jacob to make a hasty exit through it should the sudden need arise. Though where he'd have gone from there, over the rooftops and beyond, I shuddered to consider.

Jacob was wiser in the ways of the world than I, less naive certainly. I would later learn that he'd been lovers with one of his professors, and before that with another boy in school. And only heaven knows who else. Still, my seduction was slow, consisting of long touches, lingering glances, the brush of his hard cock against my thigh through our nightshirts before my mother called us to breakfast each morning. Then, one night, as we lay talking about life, about the war, and whatever books we were reading, he leaned over, as if it were quite the usual thing, and kissed me goodnight. Then he rolled over and fell asleep. Or at least pretended to fall asleep while I lay awake wondering what the kiss had meant.

The next day, I kissed him good morning, trying to be as matter of fact as he had been the night before. He smiled, ran a hand through my sleep tousled hair, then roughly pulled me to him. Now his kiss had a very clear meaning. Our lips locked, our tongues fighting for dominance, while he pulled at our nightshirts. His cock found its way between my thighs. I felt its heat, the drooling glands slicking my flesh as it glided in and out between my legs looking for my bunghole.

I was too startled to struggle when he rolled me over and mounted me, not quite clear about what was taking place yet knowing there was only one thing he could be trying to do. His thick cock was so slick with its own juices, that he entered me easily. Too startled to resist, I gasped at the pleasure that filled me as he fucked me, biting the pillow to keep from screaming when my own balls exploded and covered the sheet beneath us with my own semen. Then his whole body shuddered, collapsing on top of me, his breath echoing in my ear.

"I'm sorry," he said a moment later as I lay in his arms. "I didn't mean to come so quickly."

I didn't understand what he meant, having nothing to compare our brief collision, and my face must have betrayed me.

"Don't tell me that was your first time?"

I nodded.

"Oh, my little virgin," he whispered. "I have so much to show you."

And I was eager to learn it all. What Jacob taught me, what I was eager to learn more than anything else, was to satisfy my beloved. I became the vessel for his release. He used my body as he taught me to be used by him. I never questioned that this might not be the usual way of desire between men because it suited my desire for him so exactly. As long as I was the object of his lust, as long as he taught me how to service and satisfy his beautiful, brown shaft, I was content to be used. If he had beaten me I would have accepted it gladly at his hand.

I spent as little time at university as I could after that. I studied at home instead of the library, spending all my free time with Jacob. Shy and with so few friends before Jacob, no one wondered at this. No friends to miss me at the coffee houses and bars, no one to ask where I'd been hiding myself. My parents were happy Jacob and I had become so close, that at last I'd taken an interest in something other than my books. My being at home had the added advantage of disguising Jacob's presence in our home with my own.

Often I came home to find Jacob sitting in his chair reading, his cock already hard. Without a word I knelt at his feet, undid his trousers, and worshiped the beautiful, cut phallus before me. Wrapping my lips around my teeth as he'd taught me, I swallowed his cock whole, letting slide down my throat as he let out a little groan. Putting a hand behind my head, he rocked his groin back and forth, deep inside me, until finally, with a groan, his sweet elixir shot deep inside me. Pulling slowly out of my mouth, he let the still swollen head linger in my mouth a moment so I could taste the last few drops of his manhood still leaking from the spongy, inflated gland. After a long kiss, I'd run down stairs and get our tea. Sitting at his feet, I served him first, eating only what was left when he was done, which was sometimes nothing but crumbs. Soon I learned what cakes and cookies were his favorites and began to ask for them, though such delicacies, indeed sugar itself, came scarce as the war progressed.

I was fascinated with Jacob's hirsute body, it's thick muscular torso, broad chest and high buttocks. I was so slender, so smooth compared to his magnificent hairiness, that I never tired of worshipping his body, licking it, kissing it, as I sought to please him. He for his part, being beautiful and used such admiration, took my adoration in stride as his due. We had no words for our relationship. Words like "top" and "bottom", "master" and "slave," never occurred to us, though that is what we were. Having no other reference for physical love between men, I assumed this the natural form our love should take.

As bold as we were, we were never caught. My parents and aunt looked for reasons not to come upstairs and be reminded of the danger we were all in as long as Jacob was under our roof.

For his part, Jacob only came downstairs when the office had closed and my parents gave the signal that all was clear. He used the toilet only then, as well, confining his needs to an old chamber pot during the day. I never failed to clean the pot for him two or three times a day. I not only emptied it, I washed it out with sweet smelling soap, and took pleasure in the lowliness of my task.

Jacob only nodded his acknowledgment when I had done this job, and that was all the thanks I required as long as I could be the vessel of his physical needs, the object he emptied his balls into two, three, four times a day. As frightened as I was of our discovery, I was never happier than when I was with him.

One warm summer night, Jacob woke me with his prodding cock, rolling me over on my stomach so he could take me as was his habit. The windows were open to let in the breeze, and we could hear every sound the night had to offer. I opened myself to him, let him have his way with me, feeling my own cock harden as his magnificent shaft filled my bunghole, knowing I would explode as I always did when he fucked me. He rocked back and forth, sliding easily in and out of me, grunting and groaning as he reached his climax. Then we heard it, the sound of marching feet. We both froze, our hearts in our mouths, as we listened to them come very close, then pass us by, finally fading away in the distance.

Jacob had stayed hard the whole time, holding me close. Then, when we knew it was safe again, he finished fucking me, holding himself back until I had had my own release. Then, after he came inside me, he pulled out and held me close. Rolling me over, he let me fall back to sleep with my head against his hairy chest. I noticed that the sky was already beginning to brighten though it was still very early. I fell asleep taking in the scent of his maleness, holding on to him for fear I would someday lose him.

Some other families hiding Jews were caught, discovered or betrayed, but we were lucky. Perhaps because there was only one Jew to hide in our big house, perhaps because we so rarely spoke about it even among ourselves, our secret stayed safe. Finally, just days before the Germans surrendered, we were liberated by the Americans, and the Canadians, though I could never tell one from the other.

Jacob walked the streets again, felt the sun on his face for the first time in years. Old friends were happy to see him, startled to learn he'd been hiding with my family all through the war.

With the liberation, of course, came more problems. Jacob's family home had been commandeered by the Nazi's, and now housed the Allies. We tried to make our new friends understand that this was Jacob's house by rights, but he was never allowed past the entry way. This pleased me, of course, for it meant we could continue to share the same bed. Eventually, though, when order was restored and the local bureaucracy reestablished, he returned to his home, now mostly empty of its original fine furnishings and fixtures. He waited there, supported by what could be found of his parents' assets and reparations from the government, for news of his family that never came.

I visited him everyday, letting him use my body as he wished. As the days passed, however, and no word came of his family, he lost interest in what I had to offer him. Or when he did use me, it was with an unfamiliar violence that left me shaken but no less in love with him.

"What do you want?" I

begged. "I love you as I have loved you since the first night you fucked me. Take me again, use me, so I can feel loved again. Pleasure yourself and forget about me, but use me, please, my love."

He let me undo his pants and suck his cock, but never spoke, even when he spent himself down my throat. He only looked at me with disgust when he was done and slapped me hard across the face.

"Thank you, my love," I whispered.

A wan smile crossed his worried but still handsome face.

"When I'm myself," he whispered. "We'll be together then. Here with my family. You will be one of us just as I was once a part of your family. You'll see. It will all be so safe and cozy..."

When word finally came, a few days later, that his entire family had died in the camps, he hung himself from the ceiling of the once elegant sitting room. I was the one who found him the next day. My heart broke at that moment and never quite healed.

There would be other lovers over the years. None could make me feel owned as he had owned me. These new lovers sought to be my equal, when I wanted them only to objectify me as Jacob had. When I first noticed the handsome young men in black leather on Warmoesstraat, it frightened me a little. Partly because they so reminded me of the Nazis, at least at first glance, and partly because I found them so exciting. Eventually I found my way to the Argos and its basement. For a brief time I found there what I'd been searching for, but after a while I was too old to expect a willing master, even in the darkness of the Argos' basement.

So now I just sit with my binoculars and watch those boys in the attic apartment across the canal playing their games in what had once been our private little world, our haven from the horrors of war, the room where Jacob made me his willing slave. There is a sweetness to those years, however frightening, that can never be lost to me because I was young then, young and very much in love with the man who was, for want of a better word, my master...

I was walking down the street yesterday when I saw my two young lovers on the street. One kissed the other good-bye, and as usual I couldn't help but stare at the American.

He saw me and nodded. "Good day, sir," he said respectfully in Dutch.

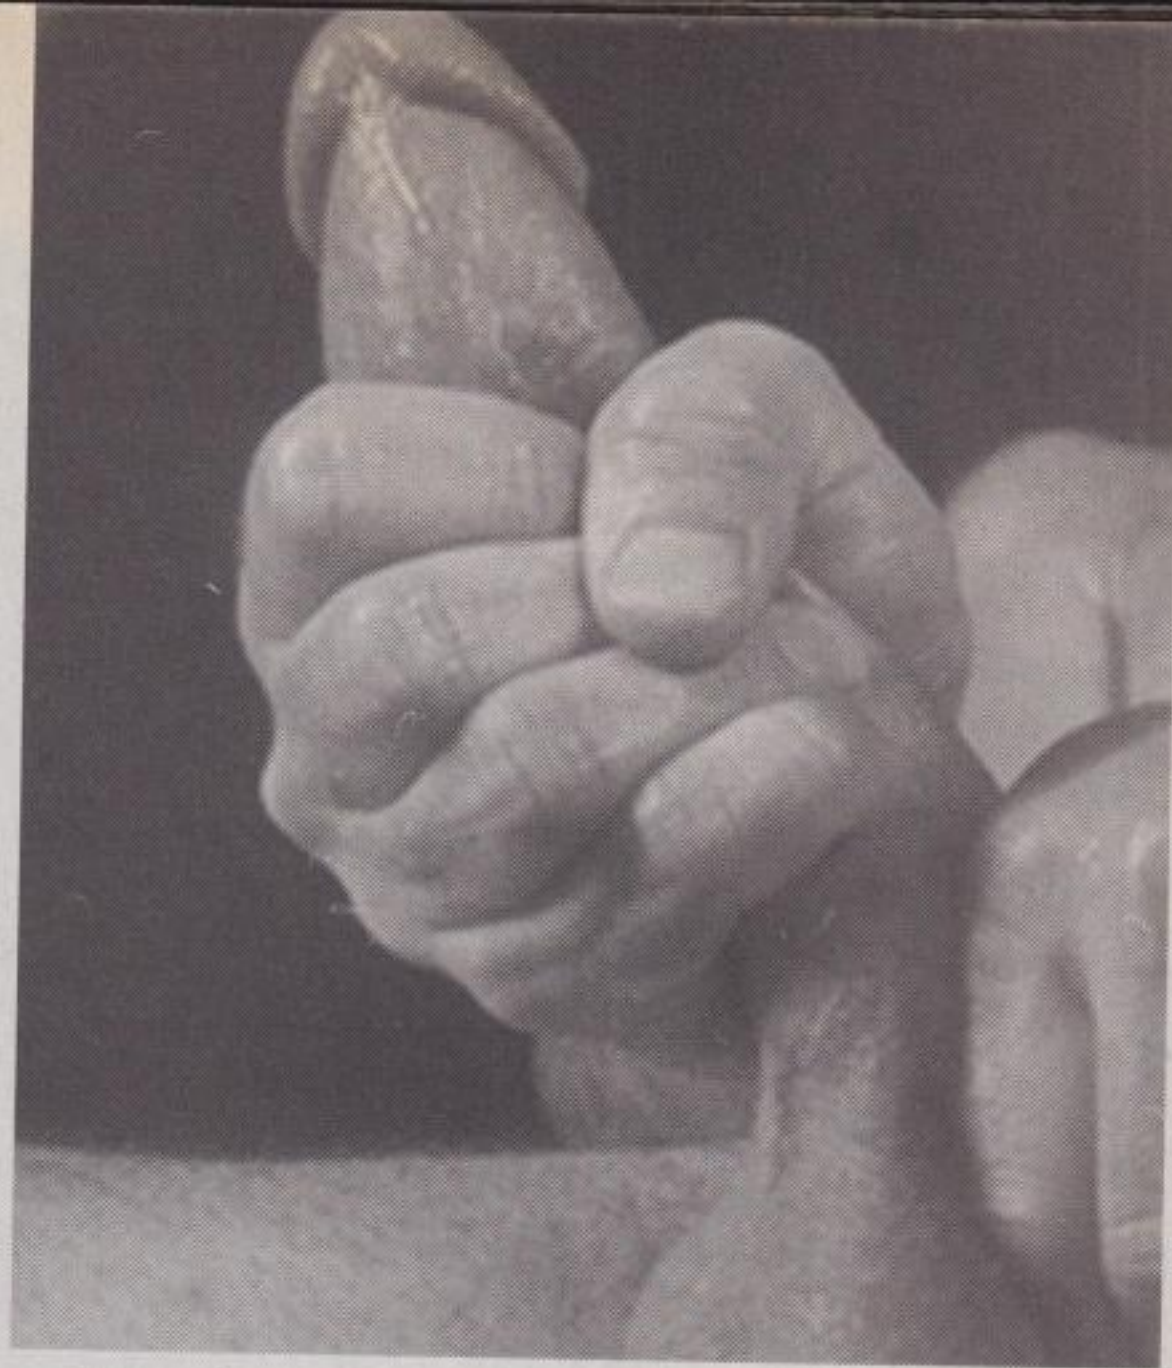

I motioned him closer and took out the only picture I have of Jacob, taken on the street just after the liberation. The American looked at the photo in silence, then at me.

"You loved him," he asked in earnest, but stilted Dutch.

"Yes," I said in my best English. "And he was a Jew. Like you?"

"Yes," said the young man, slowly. "Did he die during the war?"

"No. We hid him. There where you live," I said pointing to the canal house that had once been mine. "That was my parents' home during the war. He died later, after the war. He killed himself when his family didn't come home from the camps."

"I'm so sorry," said the American, taking my arm and leading me to a small cafe a few doors away. "Please come have coffee with me. I want to know the whole story. Tell me everything."

He sat me down and ordered two coffees for us.

"Or do you even want to tell me your story?" he asked, though he must have known full well that I needed desperately to tell it to someone after all these years.

I nodded, yes, wiping away the tears that suddenly wouldn't stop coming. He handed me the black hankie that had been in his hip pocket and I wept into a moment, as he patiently waited for me to collect myself.

"Let me introduce myself, first," he said when I'd at last taken my first sip of coffee. "My name is Jacob." He extended his hand across the table in the first honest offer of friendship I'd had in years.

"Jacob?" I asked, startled, tears coming to my eyes again.

"Yes," he smiled. "My name is Jacob Meyer." ■

Reviewed by David May.

These two videos share the same formula, cast, and minimalist set. Each video begins with a bar scene where cast members and extras socialize, cruise, suck face, grope and grind. Then come the sex scenes.

The Blue Collar Edition consists of a uniformed cop's sexual fantasies as he pulls on his nipples, sucks on his night stick, and eventually jerks-off. The vignettes are standard: two construction workers going at it, a fireman and a mechanic, a surfer and his admirer, and finally a street punk and a cop. The sex scenes are the usual action — a lot of enthusiastic fucking, kissing, cock sucking, and the occasional butt slapping.

Not veering from the formula, The Military Edition consists of a soldier's jerk-off fantasies that climax when the soldier comes with a dildo up his ass. The vignettes include an enlisted man topping an officer, two pairs of soldiers, and finally a soldier and a sailor. This one requires some suspended disbelief since the haircuts aren't regulation and the uniforms rarely complete. Still, with more men saying "yes, sir" than in the first video, these disappointments were easy to overlook.

If clothes make the man, then they make this video since it is, more than anything else, about the sexual uniforms gay men wear to get sexed. With an attractive cast, a few of them buffed and downright handsome, it's easy to get off watching these honest, straight forward sex videos — even if they aren't the best you'll ever see.

on the next two pages....

Leather News

The Good News...

According to Independent Biker magazine, the Pennsylvania Legislature is considering laws to ban discrimination against motorcyclists or people dressed like motorcyclists in employment, public accommodation and housing.

We look forward to the day when anyone can wear full leather to a job interview or apartment hunting and are not judged by their chaps but rather by their codpiece.

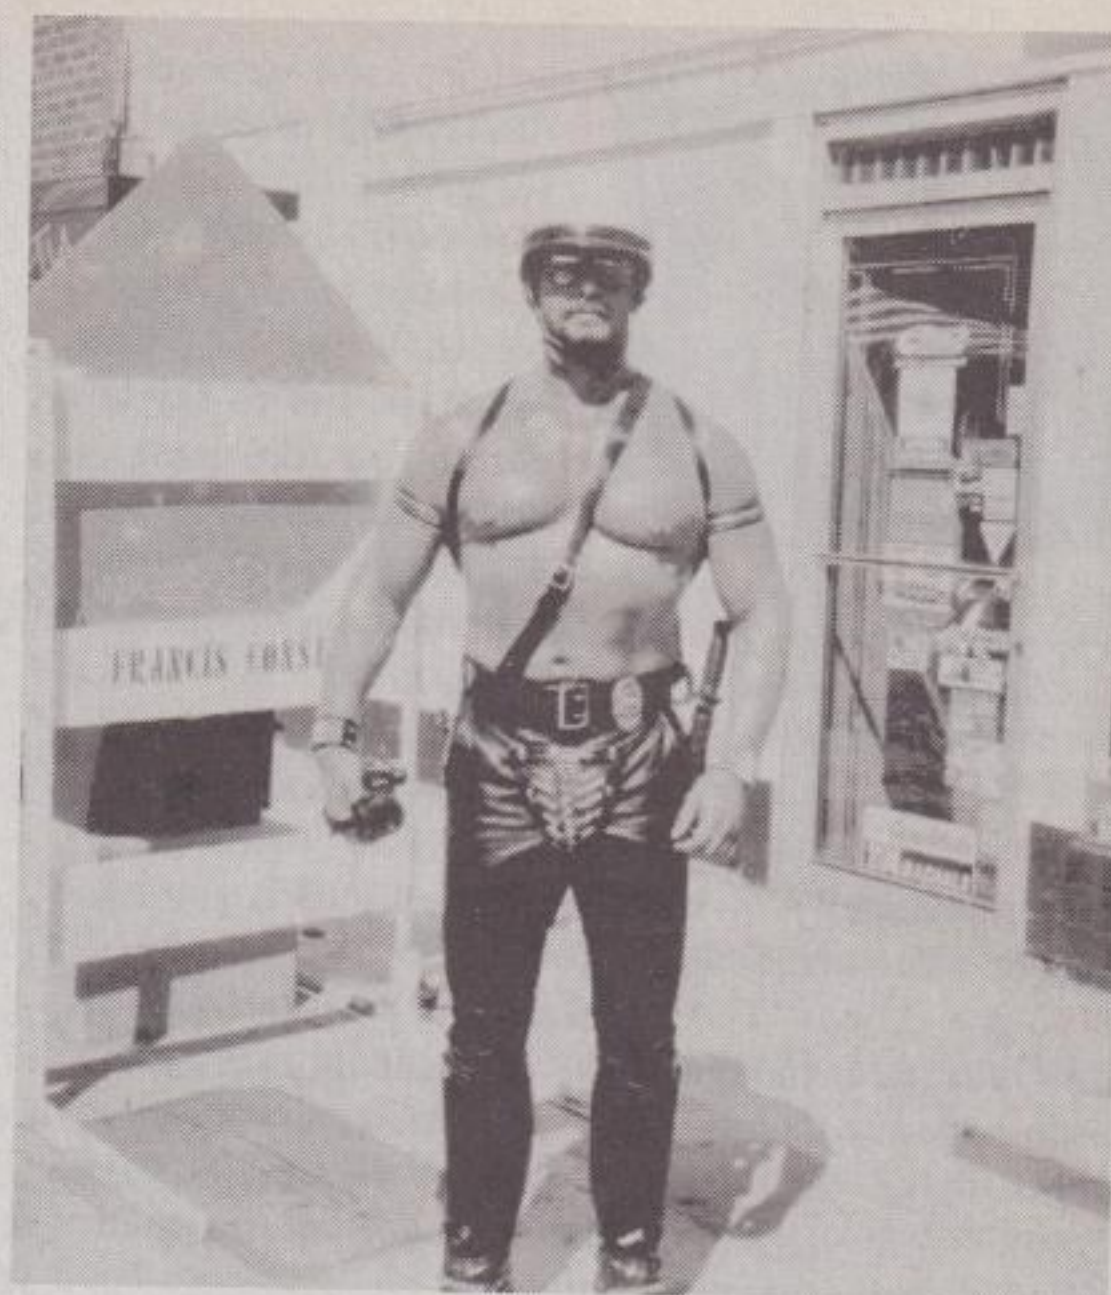

The Bad News...

An Arkansas mayoral candidate has vowed to post signs saying "No Fags In Springdale" at the city limits and back it up with an armed citizenry and a voluntary militia.

Timothy Hill, a candidate for mayor of Springdale AR, made the proposals to a meeting of the Northwest Arkansas Christian Coalition.

The candidate seems to be reacting to neighboring Fayetteville's recent Human Dignity resolution against job discrimination based on sexual orientation in city employment. The declaration, the first of its kind in Arkansas, has survived a veto by the mayor but still faces a repeal initiative on the November ballot.

None of Hill's opponents in the race for mayor were exactly leaping to pass similar protections in Springdale. Most disagreed with making any changes in city personnel policies but none could match Hill's enthusiasm. "Homo-

Anyone who disputes the notion that homosexuality is genetic in nature should meet Luke Daniel, the only man to ever hold BOTH International Drummer and International Mr. Leather. That was in 1982. Ever see a straight man age this well?

sexuals are perverts," he declared to widespread applause, "and this is a Christian nation."

Another sign favored by Hill read "Welcome to Springdale: Home of God-fearing, armed Christian citizens." Hill went on to propose that with an armed citizenry and the creation of a voluntary militia, the city could save money by cutting the police force.

No doubt Hill's anti-gay militia would be run in tandem with Arkansas' already successful "Guns in Schools" program.

Legal Update

A federal district court ruled that Oklahoma City police violated the constitution when they seized copies of the award winning film The Tin Drum from a home, libraries and video stores (Drummer 207, p.41) without search warrants or adjudicated court order. Several actions are still pending related to the case.

Police, acting on a tip from an hysterical religious radio listener, confiscated copies of the film and records from the local Blockbuster Video and began rounding up copies from libraries and private homes. One home happened to be that of a director with the American Civil Liberties Union.

Just Staying Regular

Not comfortable calling another man "girlfriend"?

San Francisco Giants center fielder Alex Diaz is shorn by a Marine recently as part of a promotion. 500 fans joined him, getting their heads shaved in exchange for four free game tickets each.

Do you automatically suck in your gut when someone calls you a "bear"? A group of gay men in San Francisco hope the alternative is just being "Regular Guys".

Terrified of being identified as "nelly", eschewing the "bears" movement because of the physical stereotype and and not willing to look at leather beyond an SM image, a group of San Francisco gay men have formed a group called Regular Guys. The group formed in 1996.

Huddling somewhere between gay images of masculinity and femininity, these men stay regular by going to meetings and doing regular, guy things.

So, how much does it cost to be a Regular Guy? $15 a year. Cheaper than all that therapy.

Shaving Fetish

Always a few years behind, the straight world seems to catching up at last to the joys of shaving what is generally not shaved. Under quiet headlines in the sex sections of certain men's health magazines, articles have appeared this spring discreetly suggesting shaving the base of the penis so as to make the dick look bigger.

What seems to have caught on like gang-busters, however is head shaving. Now everybody seems to be doing it.

In addition to a recent promotion from the San Francisco

Giants, the SFPD is getting into the act.

Captain Walter Cullop was shaved bald in front of City Hall as part of a "Buzz the Fuzz" charity fundraiser for terminally ill children.

This sort of fundraiser originated in Australia where in one year a "Crop the Cop" program raised over two million dollars.

Head and body shaving fundraisers have been common in the leather community for years.

CHICAGO: MEAT MARKET TO THE WORLD

BY HENRY B. WILSON

Chicago Past

My first trip to Chicago, I walked into the Gold Coast for the first time on a Saturday afternoon and it was hopping even at that point. I was instantly in love with the City of the Broad Shoulders...and some of the Boys of the Broad Pecs as well.

On a later trip, now collared property, Sir went to dinner with a friend and gave me a budget to spend at the leather store and another at the bar. After spending my leather allowance, I happened into Touche', at that time on Lincoln across from Male Hide Leather, on the 18th of March- when they were trying to get rid of gallons of left over green beer. Five cents a glass. After the third beer they didn't bother to charge me because handling the change was getting annoying. By the time Sir collected me, I had few clothes on, was falling-down drunk and pissing green. But I had only spent fifteen cents (plus tip).

Host to the International Mr. Leather contest for 20 years, Chicago has a rich and varied leather history. Appropriately enough, the Leather Museum and Archives has found a permanent home near where on incarnation of the old Gold Coast bar once stood.

Seeing Chicago Without IML

Although Chicago is exciting during Memorial Day weekend, with international gatherings of bears, leathersmen, cigar smokers and gay square dancers, it is a bit like going to Mardi Gras and saying you've seen New Orleans.

There is rumor of a new bar near the famous Loop, but most gay bars are in the Halstead neighborhood south of Wrigley Field known as "Boys Town". Halfway between the Loop and Boys Town in the friendly, little Manhandlers, with patio for those hot summer nights.

Most bars are at least leather friendly but the only true leather bar on Halstead is the Cellblock. The Manhole is the old Christopher Street which simply turned their polo shirts in for naugahyde vests.

Buffed men. Nice underwear parties. Pretty, but not leather.

Further up Clark Street is the Chicago Eagle, successor to the Gold Coast's honored mantle. Continuing up Clark you will run into the new location of the venerable Touche'. Still a traditional leather bar, Touche' is a touchstone with Chicago's exuberant leather past in a neighborhood expected to contain it's future.

Chicago boasts two exceptional bathhouses: the Unicorn on Halstead which is only slightly vanilla scented and Man's Country, located right next door to the Eagle.

The Bijou Theatre is also a trip. It has a nasty secret, should you get bored of the movies or live dancers out front.

Hanging Tough

by ROBERT DAVOLT

There was a friend of mine in the Navy, Tony, that was the sort of guy that you wanted to cover your ass when a fight broke out in the E-club. We didn't win every time, and Lord knows we ended up looking worse after some of the fights we won than after some we had lost, but I would guess he's the man that comes to mind when I visualize a man who is "tough."

A short, built, feisty Italian raised in the wilds of east San Diego County, he was stubborn, direct and fiercely loyal. He was no taller than I, but stocky with curly dark hair almost everywhere. He grew a handsome beard when we were out for long deployments and used to wrestle and box in high school. Tony was a man you wanted to keep on your side, particularly if things got sticky. And he was with you until you both were clear or the fight was over.

He wasn't mean, far from it. One day sitting on deck in the middle of the Pacific, he leaned over and asked "Davolt, are you gay?" I said that I didn't think so, because at that time I really didn't think so. "Just wanted you to know that it would be O.K. with me. I'm not, but I want you to know that I love you."

The first man to ever say those words to me, and it was a straight, loving husband and father. I had been there through his first tattoo, been best man at his first wedding. It might have seemed like a courageous thing for him to say, considering his conservative redneck background and the mood of the service at the time. But that was Tony. He really didn't give a fuck what people thought. He said and did what he thought was right and if someone had a problem with it, there were those ham-like fists.

I swear to you, we never did anything. Well, nothing beyond a little drunken wrestling. My thin swimmer's body was no match for his bulk and experience in wrestling. He could pin me in seconds and keep me for a while, there pinned beneath his powerful chest covered with mounds of kinky black hair. It was, you know, just straight, young bucks butting heads- that sort of shit. He didn't want me getting too cocky.

When I started to notice men, the guys I would go for were a lot like Tony. Dark. Not too tall. Not at all delicate or affected. Built like wrestlers. Loyal, simple, direct and tough.

Basic men in t-shirts and jeans. Men who looked you in the eye and expected the same. They moved with an easy confidence that was not hollow or arrogant. A body that is maintained but not pampered. A beard, not facial topiary.

I fucked them or they fucked me. It didn't seem to matter. They had that same manner about them whether they were pounding away at me or I was ramming their round muscular asses. Even while fucking them, covered with sweat in a garage or alley, every sinew straining against the intrusion, their demands for "More, man, more" would come in a tone that seemed to indicate they really deserved more. Like every male authority in your life- coach, drill instructor, superior officer, trainer- they demanded that extra measure of thrust from you. And they did it from the bottom. You had more to give and they wanted it. They didn't care who heard them, who saw them or what they thought of it.

Such men take pain so well. You know that each lash hurts them. Fuck yeah, it hurts. But dammit, this is what he signed up for and this is what he is going to take. He won't take light strokes, he won't take "no" and he won't accept your sympathy.

For me it never had much to do with gangs, prisons, sadists or heros, although I've seen tough guys with any of those dimensions. My image was always a guy who does what has to be done, who makes a commitment and doesn't back down. Even if it comes with a little pain.

The Drummer Art and Fiction Competition

Designed to encourage new writers and artists in the leather/SM/fetish genre, Drummer Magazine announces the opening of competition for the 1999 Drummer Art and Fiction Awards to be presented at the 1999 International Mr. Drummer Finals. This is an opportunity for writers, illustrators and photographers to get published, have their work evaluated and win a package of cash and prizes. Many icons of leather/SM/fetish art and writing have had their start on the pages of Drummer Magazine. Now you can, too. Competition will open July 1, 1998 and close July 1, 1999. Each accepted entry will be published in Drummer or Drummer Tough Customers and will receive a detailed, professional analysis of the publishability and commercial viability of their work. Finalists will be judged by a panel of authors, artists, publishers and leaders in the leather community. All entries become the property of Desmodus Inc. Inquire to: Drummer Art & Fiction Competition, P.O. Box 410390, San Francisco CA 94141 for complete application, rules and details.
